How You Can See The Best Of Europe By Train

Travelling Europe by Train is a great way to see the continent and there are so many great deals that its a shame not to make such a journey. These days we can travel by train all the way from London to anywhere in Europe without the need to use any other form of transport. This is a part of the world that contains some of the most memorable railway journeys in the world, and travelling by train is the most relaxing form of transport. Continental Europe has one of the best railway networks in the world which means that it is possible to get almost anywhere by using this method of travel.

One of the great train journeys in Europe is from Amsterdam to Prague. When you take this journey you will be met with some absolutely stunning scenery as you take in parts of Holland, Germany and the Western part of the Czech Republic along the way. If you want to travel at night there are sleeping compartments which you can take advantage of but you should remember that you will miss out on some amazing sights. After reaching Prague on a journey that takes approximately fourteen hours, you can choose to stay there for a day or two before heading out east to the beautiful city of Budapest.

If you want to combine train travel with skiing then the Paris to Lausanne route will be a great choice. This journey will take you about four hours but you will be taken there on one of the French high speed trains. There are a lot of ski resorts in Lausanne where you can stay or if you want to get a connecting train to the Alps you can do so.

When it comes to rail travel there is just so many options. Travelling by train is a wonderful way to get where you want to go; you get to see much more of a country by rail and the relaxed way that you get there makes it so worthwhile.
