Getting in touch with nature is easy in Scotland. Recognized as one of the best places in Europe to experience wildlife, Scotland hosts some of the most unique plant and animal species found in its part of the world. For example, have you ever heard of a Ptarmigan, a Stoat, or a Capercaillie? These animals call Scotland home. Dolphins, whales, and porpoises populate the waters just off shore, providing perfect opportunities to see some of the oceans most grand inhabitants. Ospreys and Golden Eagles make their nests in the trees and soar through the clear skies.

Horseback riding is one of the best ways to experience Scotland. With trails covering the mountains, the beaches, the rocky crags, and the plains of Scotland, riding on a horse gives you a very intimate view of Scotlands more untouched places. Winding through forests full of the United Kingdoms tallest tree, the Stronardron Douglas Fir, along with the temperate weather makes horseback riding a once in a lifetime experience.

Edinburgh, Scotlands capital, is a great place to experience the city scene. The Fringe Festival takes place in this city. As one of the most famous art festivals in the world, people from all over the globe travel to Edinburgh to put their talents on display. All sorts of buildings in the city are transformed into performance halls for theatre, singing, dance, music, comedy, and any other kind of artistic expression. Even on just a normal day, Edinburgh is filled with art, culture, and all kinds of people. The National Gallery of Edinburgh holds some of the most famous art pieces in the world.

The culture of Scotland is reflected everywhere. One of the most recognizable aspects is the music, but more specifically, the instruments. The bagpipe is of Scottish origin and is still heard today all over the world. Visiting Scotland lets you and your family gain a glimpse into some of the most outstanding Scottish cultural symbols.
