When packing toiletries for your flight, try using small bottles to pack them in. These handy little containers are durable, mostly clear or see-through, sturdy and even include waterproof varieties that makes them easier to pass through airport security. They are also great for packing shampoo and lotions, so that you can avoid needing to carry your big bottles.

Autumn is a great time to travel through New England. This is when the leaves begin to change into their beautiful golden color. The weather cools down, making the air feel refreshingly crisp. You no longer have to compete with summer tourists. This is the time when you can slow down your pace of travel and just enjoy the beauty around you.

You can download an airport map before your trip and review it before you get to the airport if you are not already familiar. This can be a lifesaver if you are running late for some reason and need to get to your gate to catch a flight to or from your destination.

Use a few different merchants from the same niche, based on what you like. Offering your visitors three or four different banners to click on gives them options in potential destinations to select from. This can also provide you with valuable information as to which merchant performs the best against the others.
